

PRESS RELEASE

TANGERINES' JOBSON IN USA INDOOR HOCKEY ROLE

St Albans Hockey Club's Matt Jobson celebrated Christmas as the new manager and assistant coach to the USA women's national indoor hockey team. A longstanding St Albans club member team captain and former tangerines' clubman of the year, Jobson is currently based in New Jersey where he runs his own field hockey coaching business, and coaches at America's 4th ranked women's hockey club and in local schools. St Albans HC has a rich indoor hockey heritage, with the club dominating indoor hockey in England for many years. Local hockey hero Andy Halliday is England indoor national men's head coach, as well as being outdoor England and GB men's team manager. Jobson (pictured below, left) is relishing his new USA national coaching role and spent the first part of December at the Four Nations international indoor hockey tournament in Toronto, where the USA side competed against teams from South Africa, Canada and Argentina.

Photo: St Albans HC's Matt Jobson (left) at the Four Nations' international indoor tournament in Toronto in December.

